Programme Outline

NZ2104 NZ Certificate in Food and Beverage Service (Level 3) Restaurant Services and Barista

This 60-credit programme enables students to develop and apply the skills and knowledge required for entry-level frontline service positions in the hospitality industry, particularly in restaurants providing table service, and as baristas.

The programme comprises two 10-credit and two 20-credit courses. Collectively, course learning outcomes and their underpinning assessment criteria of these ensure students successfully completing the programme meet the graduate profile outcomes of the New Zealand Certificate in Food and Beverage Service (Level 3) qualification for both the Restaurant Services and the Barista strands (refer to the matrix in Appendix D for graduate profile outcome/course outcome relationships).

Courses are delivered concurrently and in an integrated way to enable students to develop their food and beverage service knowledge and skills before they apply them in practical situations that reflect hospitality industry conditions. Physical resources (fully equipped barista training suite, and training restaurant and bar) support this practical learning and related assessment.

Industry speakers from different hospitality sectors and visits to local bars and restaurants underpin classroom teaching and inform practical work situations.

NZ2105 NZ Certificate in Food and Beverage Service (Level 4) (Restaurant Services)

This 60-credit programme enables students to build on their previous learning and experience and develop, apply and integrate the knowledge and advanced skills needed to be effective in a range of front-of-house roles in the food and beverage industry sector.

The programme comprises four 15-credit courses. Collectively, course learning outcomes and their underpinning assessment criteria ensure students successfully completing the programme meet the New Zealand Certificate in Food and Beverage Service (Level 4) qualification's graduate profile outcomes for the Restaurant Services strand (refer to the matrix in Appendix D for graduate profile outcome/course outcome relationships).

Courses are delivered concurrently and in an integrated way to enable students to develop their food and beverage service knowledge and skills before they apply them in practical situations that reflect hospitality food and business industry conditions. Physical resources (fully equipped barista training suite, and training restaurant and bar) support this practical learning and related assessment.

Industry speakers from different hospitality sectors and visits to local bars and restaurants underpin classroom teaching and inform practical work situations

Teaching and Learning Methods

These programmes include a blended delivery and may include tutorials, workshops, student presentations, projects, field visits, group activities and visiting speakers.

Assessments

NZ2104 NZ Certificate in Food and Beverage Service (Level 3) Restaurant Services and Barista

Assessments are competency based against course learning outcomes and assessment criteria.

Assessment against unit standard 167, Practise food safety methods in a food business under supervision is integrated with FB3110 Work Safety (Food Safety).

As indicated by the focus of the learning outcomes and assessment criteria, application of skills and knowledge is ensured through:

- practical skill-based formative and summative assessments
- final summative and integrated assessment in a fully-equipped training restaurant and/or barista suite

Industry contexts are closely simulated and students must demonstrate industry- service standards and practice equivalent to industry best practice. Knowledge quizzes and other activities are used formatively to assist with knowledge and skill development.

NZ2105 NZ Certificate in Food and Beverage Service (Level 4) (Restaurant Services)

Assessments are competency based against course learning outcomes and assessment criteria, with which assessment against City and Guilds practical outcomes is integrated. Passing the external written examinations for City and Guilds knowledge requirements is not a requirement for graduation.

As indicated by the focus of the learning outcomes and assessment criteria, application of skills and knowledge is ensured through:

- practical skill-based formative and summative assessments
- final summative and integrated assessment in a range of service and service monitoring roles in the live training restaurant.

Industry conditions are closely simulated and students must demonstrate service standards and practice equivalent to industry best practice.

Students are required to provide formative assessment feedback to their peers on technique, timeliness, quality and safety of their food and beverage service skills during skill-building activities. Peer feedback is documented, and this contributes to summative evidence that the critiquer is able to monitor others' performance in these areas. A student's ability to monitor health, safety and security compliance; effectiveness and efficiency of people interactions; customer, table and beverage service efficiency; and overall restaurant operations in an integrated way, is formally assessed when they are in the Maître D' role in live restaurants.

Self-assessment is also an integral part of students' own skill development and their performance in live restaurant services. It is an assessment requirement for students to keep a written record of self-assessment.

Knowledge quizzes and other activities are used formatively to assist with knowledge and skill development.

Information on the assessment policies and procedures can be found in the Student Guide
